251	Editors' Page
	Model for a Child Psychiatry Custody Study
253	The authors describe a psychiatric model for therapeutic divorce counseling adapted to legal procedures. Criteria have been developed by them for matching parental capacities to child developmental needs in order to help courts make custody determinations.
	JACK C. WESTMAN, M.D. AND GUY R. LORD, M.D.
	Discovery in Mental Health Class Action Litigation
271	A proposal is discussed which would protect all patients, participating or not, in class action suits. Litigants can obtain the information they need while non-participants can have their confidential records protected.
	STEPHEN SCHULTZ, ESQ.,
	LINDA L. LISTROM, ESQ. AND
	STEPHEN B. YOKEN, ESQ.
305	Comparing Institutionalization Periods and Subsequent Arrests of Insanity Acquittees and Convicted Felons
	Incarceration time in hospital of persons found not guilty by reason of insanity does not differ from that of felons incarcerated in prison. The authors found that the recidivism rates of the two groups are similar.
	MARK L. PANTLE, M.A.,
	RICHARD A. PASEWARK, PH.D. AND
	HENRY J. STEADMAN, PH.D.
317	The Incompetency Plea: Abuses and Reforms
	The author reviews the recent arguments for reforms dealing with the incompetency plea. He refutes these, and at the same time he urges a needed assessment of the results of enforced incarceration on the basis of incompetency.
	JAMES S. WULACH, PH.D., J.D.

1	Notes on Contributors
3	Editors' Page
	The Use of Involuntary Commitment and Videotape in the Psychiatric Treatment of an Incarcerated Offender: A Case Study
5	The rationale for the use of videotape in the treatment of a committed mental patient is presented. The author also shows how legal red tape can delay the treatment of such patients.
	DIXIE MOORE, PH.D.
	Changes in the Legal Status of Mental Patients as Waivers of a Constitutional Right: The Problem of Consent
31	The change of status from involuntary to voluntary of committed mental patients has often taken place without the patients' informed consent. The author persuades us that often such changes are made in order to avoid judicial hearings for these patients.
	FREDERIC H. DECKER, PH.D.
	Patient Rights and Patient Chronicity
59	The authors argue that physicians, and not the judiciary, are better able to protect patients. They suggest that proliferation of patients' rights may contribute to patients' chronicity.
	ROGER PEELE, M.D. AND RICHARD R. PALMER, M.D.
73	Effects of Psychiatric Legislation: An Example From Kansas
	What has been the impact of new laws that have expanded the rights of mental patients? Although commitment proceedings declined, the treatment of patients has not been significantly altered. LOUIS L. FRYDMAN, PH.D.
	Book Section: Essays and Reviews
99	Living in Prison: The Ecology of Survival, by Hans Toch, reviewed by Loren Skeist, M.D.
109	Mental Disabilities and Criminal Responsibility, by Herbert Fingarette and Ann Fingarette Hasse, reviewed by Erica Weinstein, M.D.

127	Notes on Contributors
129	Editors' Page
131	Competency To Stand Trial: A Historical Review and Some New Data
	The authors argue that mental health professionals can make reliable judgments in this area. An interesting study discussing assessment techniques is presented.
	NORMAN G. POYTHRESS, PH.D. AND HARLEY V. STOCK, PH.D.
147	Substituted Judgment: The Parens Patriae Justification for Involuntary Treatment of the Mentally III
	Professor Wesson discusses whether the concept of mental illness is useful in dealing with commitment procedures. She suggests a basis for reforming the present system.
	MARIANNE WESSON, J.D.
167	Should Juries Be Informed of the Consequences of the Insanity Verdict?
	The issue presented in this article is complex. The author, arguing that trial judges must have discretion in each case to determine this issue, discusses the factors to be considered.
	BART R. SCHWARTZ, ESQ.
191	Accountability in Psychiatry
	This topic is becoming increasingly important in view of consumers' demands and court pressures. Dr. Schimel clearly draws the parameters for physician responsibility.
	JOHN L. SCHIMEL, M.D.
207	Forensic and Jail Psychiatry in a Developing Tropical Region: Initiating a Consultation Program in Micronesia
	The author discusses his experiences as a forensic psychiatrist in Micronesia. Similarities and differences with our system are high-lighted.
	LAWRENCE G. WILSON, M.D.

FALL 1979

289	Notes on Contributors
291	Editors' Page
	On the Legal Aspects of Tardive Dyskinesia
295	What is the "trade-off" between psychosis and tardive dyskine- sia? The legal implications of prescribing medication that causes this disturbance are discussed in detail.
	PROFESSOR RALPH SLOVENKO
	Marriages in Turmoil: The Lawyer as Doctor
333	A major social issue is astutely addressed. Important solutions to alimony and child custody are offered.
	DORIS L. SASSOWER, ESQ.
	Expert Clinical Testimony and Professional Ethics
347	Can expert testimony have harmful consequences on the subject who hears it? Dr. Berger believes so and raises some important ethical considerations.
	LOUIS S. BERGER, PH.D.
	Legal Hazards and Protections for the Mentally Retarded: A Review
359	A general review of the law dealing with the mentally retarded is presented. Many surprising facts are revealed.
	RICHARD R. PARLOUR, M.D. AND VIRGINIA M. GOLDSMITH, R.N.

1979

137	Notes on Contributors
139	Editors' Page
	Professional Liability of the Psychiatric Nurse
141	The authors explore the malpractice liability of nurses in general and psychiatric nurses in particular. Although the standards of the profession have been upgraded, nurses find themselves increasingly subject to malpractice claims.
	PAMELA D. ANDRADE, M.S. AND JOHN C. ANDRADE, J.D.
	Innovations in Forensics: Developing Criteria for Determination of Dangerous Behavior
187	This paper examines forensic psychiatric programs, with emphasis on the role of statistical procedures. A current project concerning dangerousness is also discussed.
	JAMES M. MULLEN, PH.D. AND W. BARRY NORMAN, PH.D.
	MMPI Discrimination Between Violent and Nonviolent State Hospital Adult Male Inpatients
199	The ability of mental health professionals to predict dangerous- ness has been seriously questioned. The authors' study suggests that prediction by means of MMPI is more reliable than previ- ously noted in the literature.
	ANTONIO M. BETANCOURT, M.D. AND WILLIAM L. ALBOTT, PH.D.
	The Psychological Test of Sex and the Transsexual: A Legal Response
211	The subject of transsexualism and the various tests used by courts and others in its determination are explored. The author criticizes the psychological test used in the case of Renee Richards.
